About Nagoya University

Nagoya University (NU) was first founded in 1871 as a temporary hospital and medical school on the site of a local feudal council building in Nagoya. After undergoing several transitions, NU received its charter as a Japan’s seventh Imperial University. After 1949, in the comprehensive post-war reform of the nation’s educational system, Nagoya University was given a leadership role in the Chubu region. It has since grown into one of the leading national universities in Japan. In April 2004, Nagoya University was reformed as a “National University Corporation”. This transition to National University Corporation status has made it possible to manage the University under the strong leadership of the President founded upon university-wide consensus while still continuing to respect the independence and unique features of each school and department.

Throughout its history, NU has maintained a free and vibrant academic culture. Conducting research and education on all aspects of human beings, society, and nature, the university pursues its goal of contributing to the well-being and happiness of humankind. As an educational institution, NU aims at cultivating leaders with genuine courage and intellect. We call such leaders “Yuuki-aru chishiki-jin”; social contributors endowed with the powers of rational thought and creative imagination who have the ability to open up a new age.

The large and lush green campus of the University, only a short subway ride from the lively city center of Nagoya, provides a comfortable setting for students to focus on fulfilling ambitious goals and satisfying their thirst for knowledge. Today, NU is taking new steps to become a globalized university where students are able to acquire comprehensive knowledge, develop personal ethics and aspire to international careers.

Facts and Figures

- Six alumni and faculty members of NU have won Nobel Prizes.
- NU consists of 13 graduate schools, nine undergraduate schools, three research institutes and 18 inter-departmental education and research centers.
- Student population consists of approximately 15,800 students including 2,386 international students -15% of the student body.
- Total population of academic staff, administrative and technical staff and school teachers at affiliated junior and high schools is around 3,100.

- NU has more than 470 academic exchange partners worldwide.

Introduction to Nagoya

Located in the center of Japan, Nagoya is the heart of the country's business and industrial network. Its rich natural and human resources draw numerous companies to house their headquarters or R&D centers in the region. Known as a technology powerhouse, Nagoya has a highly developed infrastructure. At the same time, the city is filled with cultural and modern design which creates a uniquely attractive and convenient environment. This vibrant metropolitan city is surrounded by mountains and seashores, which provide outdoor and cultural activities all year round. The blend of energetic city and refreshing nature allows students to enjoy a versatile lifestyle in Nagoya.

The Graduate School of Law (GSL) has promoted an international cooperation project on “Asian Technical Legal Assistance” for more than twenty years since 1998. It aims to assist the development of legal systems in various Asian countries which have been undertaking the transition to a market economy and into constitutional and democratic nation-states.

As part of the project and to fulfill our educational and research mission as a leading institution of legal and political study in Japan, the GSL established an educational and training program known as the “LL.M. (Comparative Law) Program in Law and Political Science” all taught in English in 1999. It aims to train the next generation of top Asian legalists who can contribute to nation-building through the construction of legal systems by providing education in law and expanding networking among legal professionals in Asian countries. We expect that the Program will contribute to the human resource developments in these countries and create a structure for new networking potential among former students who can provide feedback to the GSL.

In this way, over the last 20 years, the GSL has built a wide-range of Asian legal networks. In 2021, following the establishment of the above programs and after assuring the sustainability of the networks, we have renamed the Comparative Law Program to “A Program to Enhance a Collaborative Human Resources and Network for Sustainable Socio-Economic Development in the Post-COVID-19 Asia”. Under this concept, the Program continues to train human resources in the legal arena who can develop and expand the Asian Legal Exchange Network.

We have accepted JDS participants from the targeted countries of Cambodia, Laos, Vietnam, Uzbekistan, Mongolia, Myanmar and China. The total number of JDS participants in our school is 231 (as of April 2023).

We are proud to count among our graduates, the officials of core ministries, judges, public prosecutors, counsel in significant corporations, active lawyers, and progressive academics as independent legal professionals responding to the needs of their time, continuing to be engaged in the building of their nations, fulfilling their essential role in this new period. A network has emerged among these graduates which has created a structure for finding new talent, and for offering ongoing feedback to the faculty of our Graduate School. This has allowed us to develop a diverse and varied academic environment.

Our Program emphasizes a curriculum with offerings ranging from fundamental grounding to specific areas in law and politics. Classes are conducted in English and students proceed under the individual guidance of academic supervisors, along with a wealth of support both from within the faculty and from the University. Each student can immerse themselves in the joys of learning while building strong bonds with fellow students from various nations and regions. In this way, we seek to provide the conditions for our students to reach their full potential. Each year, overseas students who join our programs enrich us further by bringing their experiences and the latest information about their home countries.

Features of the Program

◆Objectives

The Comparative Law and Politics (LL.M.) Program at our graduate school aims to foster human resources with advanced comprehensive skills and balanced abilities. It is especially focusing on the improvement of the capacity to operate a legal system for building a new post-COVID-19 society. The curriculum of the Program is structured to encompass the following elements:

- (1) Basic and broad training in law and political science
- (2) Highly specialized research analyzing the situation in the student's own country with a view to exploring solutions
- (3) Studies in the principles of the rule of law, human rights, and democracy which conducive to a market economy system
- (4) Acquisition of the abilities and techniques needed for theoretical and practical thinking
- (5) Group and flexible individual guidance that enables independent academic writing with appropriate research methods
- (6) The promotion of comparative research in group discussions with Japanese students.

◆ Overview of the program

JDS students enter Nagoya University in October of each year. Matched with a faculty supervisor, the students begin their legal studies in the Master's Program to deepen their comparative understanding of laws and political systems in Japan and that of their home countries.

In addition to the course obligations, students are required to set a practical research theme based on a systemic topic related to market economic development and to write a thesis from a comparative perspective. To progress with their research topic, students receive individual and specialized tutorials from a supervisor and get a group and staged guidance through an initial mandatory academic writing semester course followed by two semester-length courses. Thesis writing guidance is a significant component of our Program enhancing the abilities for self-initiated research, data collection skills, and methods of thinking and analysis.

Along with the courses in legal and political domain, students can also take Japanese language courses at the Nagoya University International Language Center (ILC). The Japanese language is the most common medium of expression both on campus and in daily life. We therefore stress the importance of attendance for the first six months in the elementary Japanese language study course at ILC.

Apart from regular courses, legal practitioners and scholars from home and abroad are invited to give JDS special lectures. Under the JDS Special Program, study-away trips to various regions of Japan are offered, which aims at having JDS Fellows understand the actual conditions of Japanese society and culture which has supported the legal and political system of Japan.

Necessary Curriculum to Obtain the Degrees

Completion of thirty credits of study and writing a Master's thesis in English under the supervision of academic staff are requisites to obtain a Master's degree. Students must attend the compulsory subjects which are in total ten credits; Special Research I (four credits), Special Research II (four credits), and Academic Writing I (two credits).

Each course is categorized in a lecture, seminar, or practice. In seminars, students are expected to prepare a research topic and present their findings to colleagues and faculty. Grades are assessed mainly from presentations and in class discussions. In addition to the courses listed below, the faculty recognizes certain subjects taught in the Comparative Study of Legal and Political Systems at the Graduate School of International Development (GSID) of Nagoya University as counting toward the degree. Recognition may be extended to other courses, if they are relevant to the candidate's research. Such recognition requires specific faculty approval.

Facilities

Accommodation: Nagoya University Dormitories for International Students

Our university accommodates newly enrolled students from abroad in one of the four university international residences: International Residence Yamate, International Ohmeikan House, Ishida Memorial International Residence Myoken, and International Residence Daiko.

The period of residency in each residence is basically limited to six months since the number of international students greatly exceeds the capacity.

For further information on housing for international students at Nagoya University, visit the following webpage: http://en.nagoya-u.ac.jp/academics/campus\_life/housing/index.html

Law Library:

The Law Library placed in GSL contains approximately 269,104 volumes of books in the field of law and political science, including nearly 112,715 volumes in foreign languages. An additional amount of Japanese issued periodicals, and foreign journals in the field of law and political science are available in the University Central Library. The Law School Library, along with other satellite collections within the University, is covered by the OPAC system and, for older books, the comprehensive card catalog is housed in the University Library.

The University Library:

The University Library, which possesses all library materials and maintains the union catalog of all books and journals in the university, offers circulation and book retrieval through an ID card system and reference services, including inter-library loan, photocopying, and computer-based information retrieval. For language education and other educational and research purposes, the University Library has access to satellite TV channels, including CNN News, CCTV, and KBS. The Central Library contains 1,000 reading desks in the open-stack area. Group study rooms, seminar rooms, an information corner, and an audio-visual room are also available. For further information, please visit this webpage:

Internet Service:

Wireless Internet access is available for all students on campus. When registered and enrolled in our university, the University provides the Nagoya University ID. It gives them a key to connect to the Nagoya University Wireless Network.

Message for Applicants

Within your application, the Research Proposal is of critical importance to the admission decision. The application is the basis of the initial document screening. Still, beyond that, it plays an essential role in shaping the interview for applicants who reach the final stage. It can have a determinative effect on the selection.

Accordingly, you are well-advised to take particular care in the drafting of the Research Proposal within the framework of the issues of the JDS project in your country. Describe your interests, research objectives and originality clearly and in a well-reasoned manner. When reviewing your Research Proposal or conducting interviews, the following factors will be at the forefront of our thinking:

- 1) Is there evidence of enough foundation knowledge and research skills to begin work on substantive research immediately upon entering into the study in the Graduate School? The reviewers are concerned with both general knowledge and experience in the field of law and specialized skills and knowledge necessary to the proposed topic. Are you familiar with the prominent scholars in the area? Are you aware of recent trends? Do you have a sense of the critical issues in the area, and are you able to relate them to a broader context?
- 2) Is there a clear, concise, and meaningful research topic? Setting the purpose and objective of a project is one of the most challenging tasks in research.
- 3) Is the topic you propose a good fit for research in Japan? While your proposed issue of a point may concern international matters or the laws of third countries, the reviewers are looking for its connections with Japan, and if it fits the research environment in Japan.
- 4) Do you know the basic outlines of Japanese law, politics, and public administration? What is Japan's position or experience within your topic area?
- 5) Suitability for supervision
Have you investigated our faculty members? Information on our Program and our staff are available on the Website of our school. Members of our faculty publish their articles and books in English, Japanese and other languages. Try to be aware of our work and familiarize yourself with the work of members of our faculty who specialize in your chosen area.

Please refer to the profile of our professors' page of the Website of our school.
